

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Production Is Vital

Washington, Nov. 23.—Various eminent authorities—including President Truman—recently have pointed out that the day in production is the most menacing single feature of our economic situation. A reconversion started either by strikes or other causes can block the prosperity which economists are almost a unit forecasting for the next seven ten years.

AND IT is the only thing that can prevent it. About that they fully agree. Not only prosperity hinges on full production but safety as well. Those who reason this way say that there is now in the country not only an unprecedented demand for goods of all descriptions but unprecedented money in banks and pockets with which to buy. In addition, it is our purpose to lend great sums to friendly nations abroad in order that they may achieve economic rehabilitation and with the expectation that they will use our money to buy goods from us, thus stressing our prosperity and making the loans a sound investment.

WITH this tremendous demand for goods and all this tremendous purchasing power at home

Judge Keller Grants Paroles To Three

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 23.—Judge Keller granted paroles to three inmates of the county jail, all of whom were under sentence of from two months to one year in addition to varying fines. All three were tried on Sept. 17, their minimum sentence expiring on Saturday last.

John Widmeyer, painter, Doylestown, was sentenced after pleading guilty to operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, on July 21, 1945. He was fined $150 in addition to the jail sentence and the granting of the parole was conditioned on the payment by him of $10 per month on his fine.

Paul Yeager, 34, Cedar street, Bristol, pleaded guilty at his trial on September 17 of assault and battery on Rhoda Saxton, 16, on April 17. He was paroled on the payment of $10 in settlement of his fine.

Esther Baker, Negress, Spruce street, Bristol, who attacked Patrolman Daniel Ferry when he went to the Baker home to settle a family fight on the night of July 21, was paroled with the court costs exonerated.

Judge Keller dismissed the case of Commonwealth against Francis D. Waters, charged by his wife, Lillian, Spruce street, Bristol, with non-support.

When Mrs. Waters informed the Court that she had not seen or heard of her husband for 18 years, and that she had been living with another man, and that she had never been divorced, the case was ordered dismissed.

Charged with desertion and non-support, Clark White, 21, Penn street, Bristol, was before Judge Keller and Boyer. His wife, Mildred, 23, testified that her husband has not supported her for some time. She told the Court that her husband hit her several times, and that he spends most of his money foolishly—and drank too much.

The case was continued until next week, to allow the authorities to make a further investigation.

'SWARMS OF OFFICERS'

One of the New Deal tricks is to dwell on the "inefficiency" of Congress. We Americans are given to understand that the legislative branch is so bogged down with seniority, the committee system and precedence that little can be accomplished.

This kind of talk springs usually from those who have the most to fear from an aroused Congress—organized bureaucracy and its friends. It is a bit of Communist double-talk dealt in mostly by believers in the "new order;" that is to say, State Socialism.

The truth is that Congress has plenty of power; what it really needs is not more power but less stage-fright—to feel that it has the backing of the American voters whom it represents.

Those who are zealous to streamline Congress, to enlarge its staff, raise its pay and reduce its committees, mostly are equally eager to keep the American people from remembering what Congress really is: the citizens' own branch of the national government. Under the Constitution, Congress has the largest duties and greatest powers of any branch. As to its rules, Congress made them and Congress can remake them when it chooses.

Sometimes the courts, and often Presidents, have exceeded their intended powers under the Constitution. Congress never has. It never can, except by delegation; that is one of the fundamental reasons why upsetting Congressional authority undermines free government.

The New Deal "sympathy" for Congress is easily seen through. By stressing the alleged complexity of legislative operations, it is hoped to divert attention from the poison-ivy tangle into which overgrown bureaucracy has led the executive branch of government.

Like the national finances, which have gone into figures too big really to mean anything, the complexity of the executive branch defies comprehension.

Recent surveys shed light, if not on the tangle, at least on its extent. These were made by Senator Byrd, of Virginia, who, although a fellow-Democrat with President Truman, is by no means a fellow traveller when it comes to wholesale waste of public money.

His figures reveal the mechanics of the neat trick by which it is possible to employ 3,600,000 Federal jobholders to do an amount of work which should keep fewer than 1,000,000 busy.

His surveys do not include a "chain of command" organization chart which is the usual method of explaining complicated administrative set-ups. The structure is too large and too interwoven for such treatment.

What this means may be shown by recalling that the Pennsylvania State government is far from simple; but it reduces to a chart small enough to appear on a single page of the Pennsylvania Manual.

A similar chart of the National government would be big as a bed-sheet, and would have to be printed in many colors of ink to trace the varying chains of command, the conflicts and the overlaps.

A mere listing of the separate agencies and divisions of the Federal government takes a piece of paper three feet wide and four feet long.

Statistics tell why. The administrative side of government divides into four principal divisions: the execu-

BIGGS FIGURED IN RESCUE OF CRUISERS

Operation Has Become A Navy Tradition; "Now It Can Be Told" Category

"CHEMUNG" MILEAGE

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 23.—John William Biggs, WT 3/c, Bristol, Pa., USNR, and other Navy men serving on the auxiliary oiler USS "Kennecago," figured in a wartime feat that the navy has placed in its now-it-can-be-told category.

The feat was the rescue of the damaged cruisers USS "Houston" and USS "Cambera" from the shadow of the Formosa coast, an operation which now has become a navy tradition.

The "Kennecago" was one of two oilers sent to refuel the tugs which were towing the damaged vessels out from under the very nose of the Japs. With a Jap air attack imminent and a typhoon almost upon them, the tugs could not stop to take on fuel. So the "Kennecago" and her sister oiler, the USS "Pecos," successfully performed the hazardous and delicate operation of refueling the tugs while they kept at their towing task.

Commissioned in December, 1943, the "Kennecago" was on active duty for 20 months of the war, during which she traveled more than 91,000 miles to fuel a total of 501 ships with 1,384,174 barrels of black diesel and fuel oil, besides supplying 3,500,000 gallons of aviation gasoline to carriers.

The ship saw service in the Aleutians, the Marshalls, Solomons, Admiralties, New Hebrides, the Carolines, Philippines, Pelelin, Saipan, Formosa and Japanese home waters.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 23.—William L. McGinley, G. M. 3/c, Buckley street, Bristol, Pa., helped run up while serving on the merchant tanker USS "Chemung," a grand total of 257,495 traveled miles for that ship in eight different oceans and seas. Navy records have disclosed.

FM WAVEBANDS

Ever since it was issued the Federal Communication Commission's order shifting frequency modulation broadcasters to a new waveband has been the center of heated dispute. The FCC has insisted that the costly change would improve FM reception and benefit the public in the long run.

The men who developed staticless FM, including Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, its inventor, have insisted with equal fervor that the order was not only unnecessary but unwise.

It has been difficult to understand why the FCC has stuck stubbornly by its order in the face of opposition from so many experts in the field. The shift will make all present FM receivers obsolete. It will be necessary to scrap them or make adaptations, at considerable expense, to bring in programs on the new waveband.

It is hardly fair to make the public and the broadcasters bear this expense unless there is no doubt that a major improvement in FM will result.

There is no guarantee that the change in wavebands will improve FM reception. Tests conducted at Milwaukee indicate that reception at a distance of 75 miles from the broadcaster will be far poorer on the new waveband than on the one now being used.

These tests and the testimony of men like Major Armstrong of the FCC is off the beam in forcing through the change in wavebands as matters now stand. There is too much doubt that the shift will be for the better to insist on an order which will cost both the public and the broadcasters a lot of money and hamper the development of a promising new industry.

BRACKS ON PRODUCTION

Those who accurately observe the American industrial scene remark about the hope of an early and swift reconversion that prevailed when Japan surrendered and contrast it to the situation as it prevails today.

A four-week coal strike in the meantime has cost the nation 17,000,000 tons of coal which was urgently needed in steel and other industries. Shut-downs in automobile plants have put production in this quarter far below the 500,000 cars that had been anticipated.

These losses of production and employment are deplorable because consumer demands are almost insatiable and slowdowns make inflation more menacing at a time when every effort should be devoted to getting goods into the markets quickly.

Pressure for wage increases against fixed prices is weakening the incentive to produce. The outlook is that production will be resumed only after both wages and prices have advanced, inflating on the general public purchasing increases in the cost of living.

MacArthur has things well in hand, to the discomfort of the Winchells and other left-wingers.

and abroad, if it develops that, for whatever reasons, we cannot meet this demand; that we have not got the goods to sell; that we have fallen down on our pretensions; what happens then? The answer is that the unsatisfied demand, backed by almost unlimited money, will break through the price barriers and force the cost of living sharply up. And that unavoidably will be followed by increased wages, and then we are caught in the old spiral that ends in runaway and ruinous inflation. That is the way the argument runs. And it is supported by the new population pressure figures, which are fundamental but easy to forget. For example, since 1940 the population has increased 7,000,000 and, according to the United States News, will increase another 6,500,000 in the next five years. The total already is close to 140,000,000. Since Pearl Harbor, births have been approximately 11,000,000 and the birth rate is not decreasing in the postwar period—rather the reverse. Clearly, we are in a period of rapid population expansion.

INABILITY and delay in satisfying the needs of this expanded population adds to the explosive character of its demands and makes it almost inevitable that these will break through in a way that cannot be controlled. Also, there is the effect upon our foreign loans. If we produce insufficient goods to satisfy our domestic demand, naturally we cannot meet the foreign demand. In that case we do not get our money back, the idea that the loans will benefit our own economic health becomes unsound and the loans themselves become full liabilities instead of partial assets.

THUS, it seems too clear to dispute that production is absolutely vital—and anything that interferes with or retards production is an acute and very real national danger. In the face of this unshakable fact one would think that either the President or Congress, or both, would disregard the "no change" attitude of the professional labor leaders, take some step to end the epidemic of strikes (which more than anything else prevents full production), compel labor unions to keep their contracts and get over their fear of the labor politicians. If ever there was a time calling for legislation on industrial-labor lines in the national interests rather than in the interests of either unions or employers, this would seem to be it. As Mr. B. M. Baruch recently wrote to Representative Gore, of Tennessee: "Unless strike coercion, Government must take a hand and a strong one. The miracle of American production can save the situation now, as it did in war, but it must hurry, hurry, hurry."

IN FACE of the threat of a strike of such proportions as the one now looming in Detroit, it does seem that the labor-management conference in Washington has an opportunity to measure up in a great way. The leading representatives of labor and business are there assembled under Government auspices to find means of ending industrial labor strife and adjusting controversies peaceably. There ought to be brains enough to find a way. The Government officials supposedly representing the public—Mr. Wallace and Mr. Schweikach—have their chance to supply leadership. President Truman might, if he had a plan, get action. It is a critical situation. It calls for real leadership. But up to now, it appears to be calling in vain.

RIVAL TO MY HEART by Ann Pinchot

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

At midnight, Gail and Lucienne retired to the ladies' room where Gail kicked off her slippers and rubbed her aching feet.

"When is the wedding, Lucienne?" she asked.

"A month from today—the last of October," Lucienne said coolly, and turned away from the mirror. "You know, something funny happened today. Not really funny, I mean—I was kind of sorry for her. It was that redheaded nurse I had at the hospital, remember?"

Gail remembered. So Lily had made a scene. Lily knew, at last, that she couldn't hope any more. "She got rather hysterical, Gail. I was petrified that father would hear her—she was working in the study." Lucienne's face was composed, but she was working rather desperately at her jeweled compact. "She said all sorts of absurd things."

"She's been in love with Ralph for a long time, Lucienne."

"Yes, she told me so. She went into a lot of details..." Lucienne's face flushed. "She seemed to think that if I knew about her and Ralph, I'd be disillusioned and break our engagement..." so she could have him."

Gail looked sharply at her young cousin. "Were you disillusioned?"

"A little," Lucienne conceded. "But you've got to be sensible about such things. Ralph's love was thirty—I mean, he's had to have somebody until I came along."

Gail held her breath.

"Why are you staring at me?" Lucienne demanded.

Gail smiled. "Because I admire you so much, darling. Because, she added silently, in my boots, you'd have forced Burke to marry you years ago. And have it out with his mother afterwards."

It was almost two in the morning when Stephen took Gail home.

"I've had a wonderful time," she said.

"I'd also lick anybody who'd question yours. So I'm on the spot!"

They were interrupted by the opening of the door. Katie stood before them, monumental in a red wrapper, her hair done up in curls.

"Doctor Benton?" she said excitedly. "Oh, I'm so glad you're here! I've been waitin' up for you—I must've dozed off."

"What's wrong, Katie?"

"It's that girl—that nurse! She called you up about twenty minutes ago—she was laughin' an cryin' at the same time—I tried to get hold of you."

"You mean Miss Lanahan?"

Katie nodded and Gail rushed into her office, picked up her bag and was back again. "Did you find out where she was?"

"No ma'am. She kept cryin'."

"Steve, do you mind taking me? We'll try her apartment first. I know where she lives. I treated her there once."

As they raced through the deserted streets, Gail thought bitterly, I was afraid something like this might happen.

Steve parked the car in front of the apartment house. The outside door was unlocked and they hurried up the stairs.

At Lily's door, Gail knocked urgently. There was no answer.

"I'll get the superintendent," Steve said. "He'll have a pass key."

"Wait! Lily—Lily—"

There was a faint sound in the room.

The door opened slowly. Lily Lanahan was framed in the doorway. She wore a violet robe her rich red hair was in a wild mass over her tissue-white face. She looked at Gail blankly. And then she toppled to the floor.

It was seven in the morning, when Stephen and Gail came down the wide hospital steps and turned up the boulevard. Gail shivered.

They turned toward the Zayle luncheon.

"It's fortunate we got there on time," Gail said somberly, "or she'd have hemorrhaged to death. As it is, I wasn't certain even after we got her to the hospital and gave her the transfusion."

Stephen was looking at Gail with a new understanding and respect. Last night, he had seen her stripped of her femininity, her beauty and her warmth, to become an instrument for saving a life.

The counter was crowded. But Mrs. Zayle saw them and beckoned them to a booth. Stephen ordered ham and eggs, a great mound of toast and black coffee. Gail picked up the heavy mug, holding it with both hands, to warm herself.

She had saved Lily's life. Now she must solve Lily's future.

Howard Thayer and his wife were at breakfast when Gail was ushered into the breakfast room. Howard looked up from his paper in surprise. Agnes nodded, frigidly.

"Good morning, my dear," Howard said. "I suppose you've come to talk about the nursery. Sit down and have coffee with us."

"Where is Lucienne?" Gail asked.

"She's still asleep," Agnes replied. "She got in very late last night. Is anything wrong, Gail?"

Gail steeled herself. Briefly she told them the story of Lily Lanahan and Ralph Kramer.

When she finished, Howard got up, clenching the newspaper in his hand. "We'll break the engagement instantly," he said angrily. "And I'll see that Kramer is never allowed in this town again!"

"Don't be too hasty," That was Agnes speaking; Agnes, the witcher, being tolerant! "What about Lucienne? To give up Ralph in break her heart." She looked at Howard. "You had better talk to Ralph, but we must still go through with the plans for the wedding."

Gail said slowly, "Last night, Lily anaham was swayed by self-sacrifice, and considered herself only an obstacle to Ralph's happiness. But while she's convalescing, she's going to have lots of time to herself. Time to read all about Ralph's approaching marriage, time to see him in the hospital. I doubt whether she'll maintain her present self-effacing attitude. That should be taken into consideration too."

"But what can we do?" Howard said. "What do you advise?"

Agnes agreed urgently, "You must help us, Gail."

And suddenly she realized they were pleading with her. The Howard Thayers were begging her for help!

"I'll do my best," she said.

"SWARMS OF OFFICERS"

tive office of the President, with 13 component parts; ten major departments with a total of 499 subdivisions; 23 Emergency War Agencies, with units numbering 364; and 26 independent agencies, with 265 principal parts.

That is a total of 1141 component parts in the purely administrative side of our government. Their mere number makes for hopeless confusion. Probably no one person in Washington knows where they all have headquarters and what they are supposed to be doing.

Obviously, most government problems fall into fairly few classifications. There simply are not enough different kinds of matters to need more than a thousand units, each handling one subject.

How are they all given an excuse for enlarging the payroll?

Principally by duplication of work.

Senator Byrd's figures on the numbers of units of government which are in competition with each other are illuminating.

A matter of national defense, for example, might be handled by as many as 305 separate units working in 47 different departments or independent establishments. No wonder there is confusion!

Housing, one of the major issues of the period, comes under 22 different agencies in 11 departments; labor relations, another hot potato, is under 27 in 14 departments or independent organizations.

Sixty-four agencies in 32 different files of bureaucracy have something to say about business relations. Forty-four meddle with agriculture.

Government lending, a New Deal specialty, can be handled by no fewer than 95. Sixteen have something to do with water power, 24 with rehabilitation, 21 with transportation, 37 with foreign trade, and so on down the line.

All that President Truman has suggested is that he would like a peace-time extension of the war powers which made this outrageous payroll padding possible.

The President could and should start using the pruning shears at once. The waste is running to between $5,000,000,000 and $6,000,000,000 a year.

He doesn't need any more law—not to start, at least. No job of housecleaning ever more urgently begged for action.

Middletown Township, Mr. and Mrs. James Barr, Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Mendenhall, of Oakland, Cal., were guests on Tuesday and Wednesday of Mr. and Mrs. C. Wesley Haefner. Thanksgiving Day was spent by Mr. and Mrs. Haefner, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Corrigan, Jr., and Miss Elma E. Haefner at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Walter H. Canon, in Reading.

Recent visitors of Mrs. Catherine Matlack and family were Mrs. Harold McClintic and granddaughter, and Miss Edna McClintic, of Maple Shade.

Following the Thanksgiving service on Wednesday evening in Neshaminy Methodist Church, at which the Rev. Richard R. Gay delivered the message, a social time was participated in, with refreshments included. Members of the Youth Fellowship aided in the serving of ice cream and cookies.

Horst Refers To Their Contribution To Agriculture

YEARS OF PROGRESS

By Suzanne Flick
N. S. Penna, Farm Editor
BRISTOL, Nov. 23.—(INS)—The State Agriculture Department has congratulated Pennsylvania farmers on their contribution to the nation in the output of products and was fourth in the of fruits and vegetables produced in intra-state plants. Farmers and food processors created an enviable record, declared. The Department celebrated its 50th anniversary this year. Pennsylvania won first place with a production of 2,440,000 bushels of wheat, 52,892,000 pounds of leaf tobacco; 20,000,000 bushels of mushrooms; 233,000,000 pounds of farmer-consumer shipped products; and 1,237,000 bushels of corn. State leads in the production of every-grown Christmas trees, number of baby chick hatcheries (636) and in the value of house crops. Pennsylvania is outnumbered by those products in any state west of the Mississippi River, it was reported. Commonwealth pioneered in public sanitary service and was first state to require meat inspection, Horst's report stated. Food processing, Pennsylvania produced 197,876,000 quarts of ice in 1944, the peak for the year. Philadelphia cream cheese out-produced those of any other area, said. The carbonated beverage output was first in the nation, and while the value of grape products ranked fourth.

number of hens on Pennsylvania farms during October has been reported by the State Agriculture Department.

Officials reported the seasonably low egg output was only one per cent above that of September. Production was 11 per cent under the figure for October, 1944. The 10-month yield was 2,109,000,000 eggs, 13 per cent less than the record output for the same period last year, it was added.

Specialists predicted both demands and prices would shrink next year. Current prices were near the ceiling mark, they said, while it was anticipated they will hover around support levels.

They added that chicken and turkey supplies may not exceed current stocks and that fowl consumption would remain at the present average of 24 pounds per person a year.

October milk production was reported above average for the 16th consecutive month.

Last month's output approximated 412 million pounds, a record figure for October, according to the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service. The figure was reportedly two per cent above the mark of October, 1944, but four per cent below that of last September.

Income from whole milk sales was expected to be "moderately lower" during 1946.

"The actual level will depend largely upon government action with respect to subsidies and price ceilings," officials said.

BLOODLESS CONQUEST
GRAND JUNCTION, Col.—(INS)—

Philip Massey, of Whitewater, Col., brought home his first deer of the big game season without firing a shot. He and a friend surprised the four-point buck while it was eating. The deer ran a short distance, wheezed loudly a few times and collapsed. The hunters dressed the animal and found a large acorn wedged in the buck's windpipe.

SETTING UP HOME IN PARIS IS NIGHTMARE

Coal Ration for Winter Is 900 Pounds; Dinner Rabbit Costs $12

WINDOWS, TAX BASIS

By Elizabeth Bennett
(Written Especially for I. N. S.)
PARIS, Nov. 23—(INS)—This is a warning against immigration to Europe. Don't come over here yet unless you're prepared to live primitively for the next six to 12 months. The life is anything but dull, but it is not an easy one.

We arrived three months ago, a family of two parents and two small children. For the first days we inhabited a Paris hotel. It was comfortable but expensive, rent $12 a night, meals $40 a day.

After endless negotiations with a variety of real estate agents, we rented a broken down chateau in Cormeilles, ten miles northwest of Paris.

We could have taken a house in the city, but rents here ranged from two hundred to five hundred dollars a month for small furnished houses. Centrally located apartments are impossible to find at any price.

For a reasonable rent, we acquired a 15-room barrack which is sentimentally described as a chateau by its ancient owner. With it goes two acres of grounds, including fruit trees, vines and vegetable plots.

Its previous tenants were seven Nazi SS officers who ruled the town of Cormeilles sternly and methodically. Residual evidence of their home pastimes could be found in the broken furniture, damaged walls and tangled gardens.

Before we moved in, one of the

HEADS OR TAILS—XMAS SEALS WIN

THE QUESTION OF PAYING FOR THESE first Christmas seals is settled by President Truman and Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson by the well known device of "matching." Anderson has his $5 bill up and the President is reaching—but historians report the President lost, and so paid $10 for $5 worth of the stamps sold annually by the National Tuberculosis Association to raise funds for its work. (International) town policemen checked the gardens for land mines and the estate agent went over the house for booby traps.

We can obtain a living-in maid for $20 a month. We can hire a gardener for forty cents an hour. And we can buy tobacco seeds to plant in the garden to augment our cigarette ration next spring.

So far, however, we have been living primitively; occupying only the kitchen and two bedrooms. The coal ration of 900 pounds for the entire winter prohibits more exten-

A few days ago we entertained dinner guests. The rabbit, bought from a nearby farm, cost $12. The vegetables were cheaper than in America, but the red table wine cost five times as much as pre-war French champagne.

There is a rumor in Cormeilles that the French "rent tax" is based on the number of windows and saddled with seven outside doors and 20 windows, we await the tax collector with a serious case of nerves.

There is a gas and electricity ration and if it is exceeded the current is summarily cut off. So far, however, that has been no problem as we have only two electric lights installed in the house. More bulbs will cost two dollars each and wiring nearly a dollar a foot.

It would require a real fortune to establish a family comfortably in at and Potatoes May Be Combined in Many Ways

at and potatoes are a well-known duo. Boys and men, particularly, tend to feel that both of them are a "must" for a satisfactory dinner, and often for a lunch, too. Incidentally, the foods not only taste good together, but they also complement each other nutritionally.

That meat supplies are so improved and potatoes are so plentiful, homemakers can play up popular combination without effort, says Jessie Alice Cline, home economist. For variety, the meat may be baked, boiled, broiled, hash-browned, creamed, scalloped and served in many other ways.

It is also a first-class idea to combine the meat and potatoes in the same dish occasionally. There are many variations possible, including the ever-popular mashed potatoes with slices of meat and baked or pan-browned.

Following recipes are somewhat unusual. The first is a left-over mashed potatoes, dried beef to make an appetizing breakfast or lunch-dish. The second combines individual meat pies.

Dried Beef Cakes

and dried beef. Spoon butter or margarine over left-over mashed potatoes. Drizzle with drippings.

Into small shreds all but 6 of the dried beef. Melt butter and margarine and add beef, and cooking until brown and crisp. Combine with mashed potatoes and beaten egg. Drop by spoonfuls into hot drippings. Cook on both sides and serve at once. Garnish with slices of dried beef. Serves 6.

Individual Lamb Pies

and lamb breast or shoulder. Spoon flour over lamb. Spoon butter or margarine over lamb. Sprinkle with finely chopped onion and pepper. Bake in oven. Serves 6.

and lamb breast or shoulder.

cut into 1/2 to 1-inch cubes. Dredge in flour and brown well in lard. Place browned lamb and vegetables in individual casserole dishes. Season. Rinse pan in which lamb was browned with hot water; pour this over pies. Cover and cook in a moderate oven (300 degrees F.) until lamb and vegetables are done, about 1 1/2 hours. Fifteen minutes before serving, place baking powder biscuit rounds on top. Increase oven temperature to 425 degrees F. and bake until biscuits are brown.

Pot Roast of Beef Is A Fall Favorite

Parsley Potatoes—Lima Beans
At this season of the year, there is likely to be a good deal of grass-fed beef on the market. Jessie Alice Cline, home economist, reminds homemakers that moist heat cooking methods are best suited to this leaner beef.

The meat is rich in flavor; and either braising or simmering in water will make it more tender and juicy. Long, slow cooking at low temperature is essential, to have this beef at its best when it comes to the table.

Favorite dishes for which the grass-fed beef is ideal include savory pot-roasts, Swiss or Spanish steak, country-fried steak, and hearty beef stew with its infinite variations. Miss Cline suggests this tested recipe for a pot-roast with unusually good flavor.

Creamy Pot-Roast
4 or 5 pounds beef rump
1 quart buttermilk
Flour
4 tablespoons lard
1 pint top milk

Soak beef rump in buttermilk overnight. Remove meat from buttermilk and dredge with flour; brown on all sides in hot lard. Add 1/2 cup of buttermilk in which meat soaked. Cover tightly; simmer until tender, allowing 45 minutes to 1 hour per pound. When additional moisture is required, add more of the buttermilk. When pot-roast is ready to serve, there should be about 1 cup liquid in the kettle. Remove meat; add 1 pint top-milk to the liquid, and let it cook down to the consistency of thin gravy. Serves 10 to 12.

WATCH FOR SPECIAL EVERY WEEK

HURRICANE LAMPS on a Christmas mantel or holiday buffet—can't you picture them? They have been scarce, but the Snellenburg Lamp Dept. is now presenting a delightful electrified collection from $15.95 to $100 a pair. Don't forget, too, that "hurricanes" make perfect gifts, and with glamour! At $24.95 a pair there is a charming group in clear crystal glass, with tall etched globes, graceful prisms. COCKTAIL WATCHES! Something entirely new, and the Snellenburg Jewelry Dept. is among the first shops to have the best designs. These watches are stunning bits of jewelry. One at $59.74 (tax included) comes in heavy 14 kt. gold. Both case and bracelet band are handmade. And the cover of this seventeen jewel watch—it has an exquisite "little bird"—is encrusted with matched oriental rubies and six perfectly matched diamonds! Oh, beauty, beauty! I am particularly intrigued by a group of the American hooked variety which have the soft gaiety of Christmas cards! What more delightful for holiday decoration or for Christmas giving? The designs were created by real artists and are beautifully woven. There are three sizes and prices, a 2x4 ft. at $15.95, a 3x5 ft. at $28.95, a 4x6 ft. at $46.50. GREAT OPPORTUNITY. One of the most versatile artists in the city has consented to sketch portraits of children, and adults, for practically a song, and in a few minutes. Until Christmas you will find him ensconced in a corner of the Snellenburg Toy Dept. I was terrifically impressed, as you will be, by the warm, life-like quality of this artist's work—all done in so brief a time. The sketches are of a good size, worth keeping always. Children's profiles, only 75c each; adults, $1; all full-face views, $2. Here is a great opportunity. Give Dad or the grandparents portraits of the children for Christmas! Also, nearby are thousands of toys, old favorites and new, for holiday buying. See the dolls, including new Hollywood beauties of fashion or fantasy costing but $1.15 to $2.29. (4th fl.)

XMAS TREES to keep from year to year are now being shown in the Flower Shop of the Snellenburg Store. Gleaming white cellophane trees about 30" high, with wooden star bases, are priced at $1.29. Little artificial frosted green trees, about 12" in height, for tables or under big trees, are priced at 59c. Artistic door and mantel wreaths of treated natural greens, ornamented with a red bow each, are priced at $1 and $1.89. Buy while the selection is good. (1st fl.)

A FAIRY QUALITY is given to any room with a sparkling mirror large enough to reflect the life of the room, the movements of a family or owner, or friends—as well as loved furnishings. In fixing the living-room for the holidays remember this. It is incredible but true that such mirrors, 26x34 inches in size, in clear Pittsburgh plate glass, with different exquisite classic frames in gift, can be had in the Snellenburg Mirror Dept. for only $12.95. Fastidious decorators say these mirrors are marvels at the price. Gift your rooms! (4th fl.)

BEVERLY TO PLAY BURLINGTON SATURDAY

First Nocturnal Football Game To Be Staged In New Jersey City

THE CLOSING CONTEST

The first nocturnal football game to be staged in the city of Burlington, will be played Saturday, Nov. 24, 1945, at the Burlington High School Field, when the newly-crowned champions of the Burlington County League, the Beverly St. Joe's A. C. tackle the Burlington A. A. In the closing contest of the successful Burleo loop, in what should prove a thriller in South Jersey independent ranks.

Of interest to the Bristol fans is the fact that six Bristol players are included in the Beverly squad, with a possibility that the three Chichilli brothers, Michael, Cornelius and Nat, and Rosario Bono, will be starters. Sure to see plenty of action will be Angelo Sallustio and Ralph Neitzel.

Kick off is scheduled for 8.15 p. m.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Now that many craftsmen are returning to their shops and studios, the Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen is planning a state-wide exhibition of the craftwork of Pennsylvania to be shown at the Art Alliance in Philadelphia from April 15 to May 5. The exhibition will include woodwork, weaving, pottery, leatherwork, handmade glass, ironwork, bookbinding, metalwork, jewelry, etc. This marks the first attempt to assemble the best of Pennsylvania's contemporary handicraft products on a state-wide basis, for presentation in this State.

During the war years the American consumer has become more art conscious, and more quality conscious than ever before. Handmade goods, once considered a luxury are now seen as an economy, because of the durability and lasting beauty of most handicraftsmanship. Never before has the market for this class of merchandise been better. Many Pennsylvanians have been quick to see new opportunities for self-employment through craftwork. The State's traditions of original and beautiful weaving, pottery and cabinet work are inspiring a growing number of our people to create for modern needs equally beautiful and useful objects. In response to this demand there is today a marked increase in the number of classes offered in various types of craft work.

The Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen is offering a prize of twenty-five dollars for the best seal or symbol for Pennsylvania Handicraft products to be used on all articles sold by the Guild. This offers an incentive to craftsmen to keep their work up to Guild standards and protects the buying public from substandard products. The seal contest closes December 1, 1945.

Anyone interested in entering their work in this exhibition, or wishing information on the Contest rules for the State handicraft symbol, may write to the State Planning Board, Harrisburg, for further information.
